

MR. BRAINWASH

Mr Brainwash exploded onto the LA scene in 2008. His debut show, 'Life is Beautiful', transformed a cavernous disused TV studio into a street art spectacular which attracted over 50,000 visitors, making it the most visited private exhibition in history. By the end of the first week his sales had reached almost $1m, he was on the cover of LA Weekly and the original five day exhibition had been extended to run for three months. Overnight, Mr Brainwash, AKA Thierry Guetta, a previously unknown French street artist, had become what Banksy described as "a phenomenon"

Innovative and fearless, the work of Mr Brainwash embraces a riot of themes and styles, statements and jokes, commentary and chaos. Combining elements from pop art's past, from classical paintings and from the raw components of his street art beginnings, he creates larger-than-life celebrations of culture, imagination and sheer audacity.

Confidently navigating the worlds of cinema, celebrity, music and sport, Mr. Brainwash has collaborated with partners from Marvel Comics to the Red Hot Chilli Peppers, not to mention footballing legend Pele. His extraordinary success has won him personal commissions from stars including Madonna and collectors from all walks of life including the Obamas, the Beckhams, Samuel L Jackson, the Kardashians, Rihanna, Al Pacino and many more.

In 2010, he appeared as the central character in the Oscar nominated documentary film Exit Through the Gift Shop, directed by Banksy and including much of his own footage.

It charts the unconventional rise of an art phenomenon who began as a maverick film maker but transformed himself into a key player in the sphere of street art, the biggest counter-cultural movement since Punk, and brought Mr Brainwash and his art to even greater prominence. In the last 10 years, this subversive and playful visionary has been placed on the elite list of the world's top artists based on auction sales of nearly $2.5million and his meteoric rise has been the largest ever seen in the Art Market.

“Mr. Brainwash is an enigma. He is awesome, infuriating, almost impossible to define. His process chiefly consists of throwing random modern cultural icons into a blender and turning it up to eleven. The results are by turns profound, provocative and inspirational.”
